Flow to West of Arab 'Petrodollars' Is Slower Than Expected

By Leonard Silk

(Second of two articles) NEW YORK (NYT),-Hundreds of foreign banking, brokerage and investment institutions in financial centers all over the world are waiting for the big flood of "petrodollars' to come. but so far the flows of Arab money have been less than ex-

One reason for this is that the payments for oil from the big international od companies have not yet reached the Middle Eastern oll-producing states in strable amounts. Major oil companies such as Exxon. Mobil and Gulf normally pay their bills with lags of three to six months. The funds of the countries are thus piling up in the oil companies' own accounts. Eigger transfers will occur within the next few months

A second reason for the himited visibility of the Arabs' new wealth so far is that a great deal of Arab money has been flowing to the Soviet Union, in payment for armament furnished to Egypt and Syria. The Arabs-especially the Saudis-bankroiled the Egyptians and Syrians. The Russians have been eager to get doiobligations—especially to the Americans for the huge 1973 wheat deal.

Thus, Soviet supplies of weapons to Egypt and Syria were ecsentially paid for by higher oil prices charged in the West by the Arabs. The Saudis Kuwaitis and Libyans have been shipping mone: to the Russians, who transshipped some of it back to the United States. European sources estimate that the Arab payments to the Russians hate amounted to nearly $5 billion.

Trade Growing

Middle Eastern money is also being used in growing amounts to increase imports from Western Europe and Japan. In Europe. West Germany appears to be reaping the biggest gains in trade with the Arabs.

Much oil money is Lkely to go for increasing imports of armaments from both the Soviet Union and the Western nations. Thus far, the Arabs are taking their time in making long-range investment commitments. Prof. Ibrahim Owers of Georgetown University says that they "are studying all prespects and secking to find on their own what lars to meet their own external investments are open to them."

Prof. Owers, a native of Egypt, feels that the Arabs are in no hurry because of the lag in collecting the oil funds due them: he suggests that the lag will last six or seven months more.

The greatest single share of Arab money seems to be going into the Eurodollar market—doland into foreign exchange, especially West German marks. For the time being, the Arabs are staying liquid. Such long-term investment as they have done in Europe has gone into gilt-caged securities in London and into West German bonds. and they have reportedly been buyers of gold. They have also parked millions in longer-term time deposits, ranging from three to 10 years. Unlike the Arabs, Venezuela-a beneficiary of the quadrupled oil price-has been a heavy buyer of United States

Nervous About Dollar

The Arabs, American observers agree, are nervous about putting too much of their holdings into dollars. They have been asking Washington for guarantees against further devaluations, but the Treasury has refused to give such guarantees. Some critics feel that the United States should be prepared to sell bonds to the Arabs, denominated in riyals or other Middle Eastern currencies. which would assure repayment without loss of value.

Even without guarantees, much of the Arab money going into the Eurodollar market is likely to find its way to the United States anyway-directly from the Middle East or indirectly by way of Europe-given the still domihant international role of the dollar and the size of the American capital market.

All countries that purchase oil are strapped for funds this year. The oll squeeze is intensifying the demand for Eurodollars by nations threatened with unpayable balance-of-payments deficits. Including both private and public borrowings, Eurodollar loans this year are forecast to total $40 bilbon-cbout double last year.

The resource-poor developing countries, such as India, Bangladesh and Pakistan, have been thrown into desperate straits by the increased oil price and regard increased loans or aid from abroad as a life-and-death matter. And more and more, it is

Arab money that borrowers will be taking. Immediately, given the relatively moderate flow of Arab oil money and the heavy demands for funds, interest rates are being forced up. Although a bigger flow of Arab money into the capital markets is expected to case interest rates next summer. not all money-market experts are confident that a timely adjustment will take place. Now more than ever, such economists as Prof. Richard Cooper of Yale and Prof. Sidney Rolle of Long Island University feel the world needs an international central bank to serve as a lender of last resort, should some major national financial institution crack. The danger is that, if there is no prompt bailout, there could be an extinguishment of money and credit that would bring depression in its wake.

Others believe that such fears are exaggerated and that the highly developed international money markets will automatically take care of the recycling of excess funds flowing to the Middle Eastern states back into the normal channels of the world monetary system.

Peking Journal, in Power Politics, Compliments Franklin and Edison TOKYO, April 26 (AP).-After months of being critical of Western culture, the Chinese Communist theoretical journal, Red Flag, has said some complimentary things about a couple of Americans-Ben Franklin and Thomas Edison.

It did so in an article calling on the Chinese masses to develop the nation's power industry. As reported by the Chinese news agency, monitored in Tokyo, Red Flag set out to prove that disgraced former President Liu Shao-chi and the late Lin Piso, former defense minister, were wrong when they insisted that the power industry was beyond ordinary people.

"In this way," it said, "they dampened the enthusiasm of the masses for running power plants and stations and used foreign dogmas' to oppose the principle of independence and

It added that some "bourgeois specialists" had said the power industry was complicated and had to be run by a few individuals, not the masses. Red Flag countered this argument with the examples of Franklin and Edison.

"Benjamin Franklin (1706-1790), who started as a printer's apprentice, was first in the world to discover the identity of electricity and it was Thomas Edison (1847-1931), a telegraph operator, who made the first battery," it said.

Soviet Radar Tracks Ships From Space

Polaris Surveillance Held Aim of System

By Thomas O'Toole

WASHINGTON, April 26 (WP).

—The Soviet Union has orbited radar-carrying satellites that can monitor surface ship traffic around the globe, intelligence sources believe.

The Soviet space program is understood to have put at least eight, and as many as 10, radar itellites into orbit in the last four years, each one an improve-ment over the other.

The United States has put no radar satellites . ito orbit, a: least partly because of U.S. confidence in the reconnaissance satellites that photograph military activity around the earth. Six-Week Life Span

Intelligence sources believe the Soviet radar satellites still are experimental, operating for only six weeks at a time and only over the Indian Ocean and the Baltic Sca. Most space experts believe the Soviet radar satellite program seeks to detect Polaris submarines under the seas. One possible way of doing this would be to use orbiting infrared radar stations to track a submarine's heat wake.

The last of the radar satellites is identified as Cosmos-626, which was launched from Tyuratam in the Soviet Union Dec. 27, 1973. The satellite was rocketed into an orbit as high as 163 miles above the earth, where it stayed until Feb. 11.

Separates in Space On that date, Cosmos-626 "separated" into at least two parts, one of which was fired by its cwn rocket engine into a higher orbit. The North American Air Defense Command identified this part of the satellite as "an object of Cosmos-626", saying that it rocketed to an altitude of 614 miles.

The second part of the satellite stayed in the lower orbit, falling into the atmosphere and breaking up from atmospheric friction on Intelligence experts believe that the part of Cosmos-626 that went into the higher orbit was the power supply for the orbital radar. Sources believe the power for the radar was supplied by the radioactive heat of Polonium-210, an isotope and an extremely active source of radioactive heat. By means of an efficient but costly thermoelectric mechanism, it can be converted into as much as 2,000 kilowatts of electricity, enough to operate a radar set in ships and even identify them according to shape and size.

Democrats Take 23-Point Lead in Harris Vote Poll

NEW YORK, April 26 (AP). The Louis Harris survey gives the Democrats a 23-point advantage over Republicans in November congressional elections, the largest margin it has ever reported.

The poll organization said that a survey of 1.184 "likely voters" late last month posed the ques-

"If you had to decide right now, as far as this district is concerned, for Congress this fall, do you think you would vote Republican or Democratic?" The results showed that 52 percent would vote Democratic, 29 percent Republican and 19 percent were not sure, the poll said. The Democrats' lead has more than doubled since last May and is larger than any actual voting result since the 1930s, the survey said.

To another question, 38 percent said they felt less likely to vote Republican this year because of the Watergate matter; 5 percent said more likely; 53 percent said Watergate made no real difference and 4 percent were not sure. The poll said that Watergate most affected the voting intentions of persons living in the West, persons under 30, skilled labor and union members, white collar workers and those with incomes of $15,000 and above.

House Approves Space Budget

WASHINGTON, April 26 (UPI). -The House has passed and sent to the Senate authorization for a $3.26-billion space budget, $13 million more than the administration requested.

The measure, approved yesterday on a 341-37 roll-call vote, includes $820 million for continued development of a space shuttle craft which the National Aeronautics and Space Administration said it hoped would be ready for a test orbital flight in the summer of 1979.

The House Space Committee had cut $26 million from administration requests for space-flight operations and facilities, but it added $32 million over requests for the shuttle program and for research and tehnology.

'Seed Money' for Peace

President Nixon's request for $900 million. In the present case, the distribution of in foreign aid for the Middle East, divided among Israel, Egypt and Jordan, with a "contingency fund" that may be intended for Syria, has been variously described. Mr. Nixon called his whole foreign aid package of $5.16 billion the minimum investment which the United States could make "to maintain the present degree of international equilibrium and advance our efforts to construct a durable peace with prosperity." Some. like Sen. Fulbright, question the whole assistance program abroad; others, referring specifically to the Middle East allocations, call them a "balancing act." But the most ridiculous reaction is that which calls the Mideast portion of the package, pejoratively. an attempt to "buy peace."

It is ridiculous because, if a rational and durable peace could be purchased in the Middle East for twice $900 million it would be the best bargain the United States had ever made. It is also ridiculous because such a peace cannot be bought, and both President Nixon and Mr. Rissinger know that as well as their critics. The whole American experience in exporting cash and goods to help foreign countries proves that neither peace nor friendship are purchasable commodities: that the real service of forelen aid is to provide, in a phrase very popular among American foundations, "seed money," in the hope that some tangible benefits may result for the recipient, and some intangibles flow back to the sender.

funds in the Middle East gives a concrete measure of the at least relative objectivity of the United States in its efforts to mediate the Middle East conflict.

And that is a worthy goal. It certainly does not imply an abandonment of Israel, as a viable national community, with legitimate security requirements. But at the same time it refutes a notion cherished by Arab radicals (in spite of the American stand in the 1956 crisis) that Washington has no interest in Israel's neighbors, and is willing to issue blank checks to Israel itself.

Such a demonstration, through foreign aid, would not buy peace, but it could advance the prospects of peace. And that, for the short haul, is one of the most urgent tasks of American policy, and objectives of foreign assistance. It does not, of course, go to the roots of the deeper problem of economic relations between the haves and the havenots in the world, the subject which has engaged the present special session of the UN to, as yet, little positive purpose. Secretary-General Waldheim's intervention in the prolonged debate, urging action by the UN before the session on raw materials adjourns, was a sharp reminder that this broad problem has its own urgencies, to which the American foreign aid programs must soon be adjusted. But for Congress, the Middle East is an immediate need, a "house on fire" that must be saved. Its own actions in that area cannot walt upon the creation of an international approach to the global crisis.

France's Election Battle

campaign in France has opened the possibility of a fundamental change in the country's political future. After 16 years of oneman and one-party domination under Gen. de Gaulle and his successor. President Pompidou, a serious double challenge to continued Gaullist rule has been mounted from Socialist François Mitterrand, who obtained a 45 percent vote against De Gaulle in 1985, has been gaining support with a middle-of-the-road approach that has brought reproving murmurs from his Communist allies. The Communists and all other significant left and center-left candidates have withdrawn from the race, opening the possibility of his winning more than 50 percent of the votes. Which would mean election in the first round of polling on May 5.

At the same time, Jacques Chaban-Delmas, a former prime minister under President chief competitor on the center-right. Finance Minister Valery Giscard d'Estaing, the conservative leader of the Gaullist-allied Independent Republicans.

"Change without risk" is the slogan that may propel Mr. Giscard d'Estaing into second place in the May 5 voting and even make him the favorite against Mr. Mitterrand in the two-candidate second-round runoff if no candidate wins a majority in the first round. Despite his unpopularity among traditional Gaullists and a general conviction that his conservative views would make him a less effective candidate against Mr. Mitterrand in the second round. Mr. Giscard d'Estaing's performance already is bringing piedges of Gaullist runoff support.

A few left-wing Gaullists have announced a preference for Mr. Mitterrand over either of

Rapidly and unexpectedly, the presidential the chief center-right candidates. Although these announcements represent only a handful of votes, they reflect the growing feeling in France that something fundamental is

> Mr. Mitterrand's election would of course bring the most radical change, despite his moderate campaign. It would give France its first Communist ministers since 1947 and bring a period of political instability, with new parliamentary elections and, probably. a flight of capital.

Mr. Giscard d'Estaing undoubtedly would try to build a broad center coalition and might lose significant Gaullist support in the process. A gradual political realignment might well be the result, with Gaullist strength waning and the moribund center parties resuming their role as the arbiters of French politics

But even a victory by Mr. Chaban-Delmas would probably mean an end of the Gaullist era as known in the past. The fact that he is only able to win about 25 percent of the vote in current polis reveals to all the limited support of the Gaullist party, now that De Gaulle and Mr. Pompidou are gone. It remains the biggest party, but unable any longer to govern alone, if need be,

All the main candidates are fighting for middle-of-the-road support and, in foreign policy, that means endorsing a united Europe and friendship with the United States. Their personal inclinations also favor this policy. But Mr. Mitterrand would have difficulty carrying his Communist allies in that direction. Mr. Chaban-Delmas or Mr. Giscard d'Estaing, in contrast, would undoubtedly make Paris an easier partner in the Western alliance than France has been during most of the last 16 years.

Overturn in Portugal

Idealistic Portuguese Army officers, determined to restore democracy at home and peace to the African territories, appear to have succeeded—on their second attempt in five weeks-in overthrowing Premier Marcello Caetano's authoritarian government. The National Junta of Salvation, as the rebel force calls itself, promises to govern the country only until elections can be held for an assembly that will write a new democratic constitution.

A break in the surface solidarity of armed forces support for the wars to put down black freedom fighters in Angola. Mozambique and Guinea-Bissau became inevitable when Portugal's most popular soldier came home from four years in Africa to declare that military victories could not be attained. Gen. Antonio de Spinola warned in a book that the wars were only isolating Portugal from friends and allies and impoverishing the country.

The abortive rising of some army units after the dismissal in March of Gen. Spinola and his superior from Portugal's two top military posts indicated how deeply the forces had been affected by Spinola's warnings and by his advocacy of self-determination for the African territories and their possible federation as equal states with the mother country. The new junta's first declaration, promising peace among Portuguese "of all creeds and races." reflects exactly the spirit of Gen, Spinola's rhetoric.

If the junta-said to include both Gen. Spinola and Gen. Francisco da Costa Gomes, who was dismissed with him last monthcan carry out its program it will lift a great load from a NATO alliance constantly embarrassed by a member government that practiced repression at home and pursued colonial wars in Africa

Of far greater importance, the junta promises to render justice to black majorities in the African territories and restore freedom to Portuguese who have never really known it since the beginning of the dictatorship o. the late Antonio de Oliveira Salazar over 40 years ago.

The Kissinger-Jackson Row

By James Reston

WASHINGTON—The Kissinger-Jackson row over how to negouate a strategic military arms agreement with the Soviet Union illustrates what happens here when a President loses the confidence of the people and politicians begin scrambling to suc-

For centuries the nations have been trying unsuccessfully to oring the weapons of war under control, and it is obvious now that nobody in Washington or in Moscow has any clear answer to the problem. Therefore, at-tempts to minimize the danger of one more round in the arms race require at least some confidence in the good faith and integrity of the negotiators.

But in the present poisonous atmosphere of suspicion in Washington, there is very little confidence in the good faith of anybody in the White House the Congress or the press, Man speak and act, but their words and actions are not taken straight but searched for some other hidden motive.

Tragic Element

The suspicion is often justified, but there is an element of tragedy in all this, for the atmosphere of doubt in Washington is now beginning to spread beyond Watergate and politics to policy. not only to the President and the cast of characters in the political scandals, who are the men of the past, but to people like Jackson and Kissinger, who may have more to say about the future and the policy of arms control than anybody else.

The main thing about this is that Kissinger and Jackson are now involved in a public row about the control of nuclear mental question should be negotizted with the Soviet Union but have never really talked out their agreement because the President frontations of the cold war.

differences in private before they differed with one another in

This is very odd, They are both intelligent and knowledgeable men, and know that the control of arms has reached a critical point with Moscow, Mr. Jackson wants a comprehensive agreement with the Russians on arms control, which Mr. Kissinger also wants but thinks he cannot

Therefore, Mr. Kissinger is willing to do the best he can to keep the talks going. What, he asks, if we added to all our present difficulties at home and the Middle East the demands of Sen Jackson and a return to the confrontations of the cold war. Why argue about the number of missiles? People are killed by nuclear warheads and not by the missiles themselves, so we have to avoid 20,000 missiles with multiple warheads by the end of the 1970s, and slow down the arms race as best we can,

Jackson insists that we draw the line with the Soviet Union now-force an agreement for a major reduction of arms, de-mand that the Soviet Union agree to the emigration of 100,000 Soviet citizens a year, not only the aggrieved Jews but the dissidents from the Ukraine and the Baltic states and the other Soviet nationalities as well.

Now is the time, Jackson asys, to be tough. Now is the time, says Kissinger, to be careful. You can make a good case either way. and the issues are so complicated and so grave and even dangerous that it is hard to understand why these two men do not talk out the controversy in private before they throw it into the headlines of the world.

to give the impression of an agreement with the Soviet Union on arms, even if, as Jackson believes, it is a fake.

The administration denies this in public and suggests in private that Jackson is really running for president on an anti-Soviet, pro-labor and pro-Israel platform. Probably there is some truth in this both ways, but not much,

We are in terrible trouble in Washington these days, but we have not really declined to the point that the administration would fiddle with the security of the Republic in order to pick up a few conservative votes in the House and Senate against the impeachment and conviction of the President. Similarly, Jackson may be running for the presidency, but again not by proposing policies that would help him at the expense of the nation. armor comprises Russian T-55 and T-62 tanks. The infantry's principal automatic weapon is the Russian Kalashnikov. When glimpsing these facts firsthand one appreciates what a momentous decision it was for President Anwar Sadat to announce that Egypt would no longer depend for military equipment on the Soviet Union alone. The ultimate implication is plain: Slowly the United States will be asked to move in as the main substitute supplier. Not that this was Sadat's immediate intention. He hoped samply to avoid relying wholly on Moscow's goodwill, thus becoming subject to its blackmail. But things don't go by easy stages in this part of the world and the Kremlin caught the message. It is already tightening the screws on Egypt before the United States can even begin to belp.

Plea Spurned

It has sourned Sadat's plea to defer the scheduled installment on payment for Soviet arms already furnished. It has failed to send promised MiG-23 aircraft spare parts. It has choked off economic commodities unless Egypt pays hard cash it doesn't possess. Aiready tea and suçar are stricti; rationed here. Moscow obviously realizes the immensity of its loss to Washington in terms of influence in this key to the Arab and Mediterranean worlds. Now it is fighting back by subversion, propaganda and economic pressure. It doesn't like the thought that all its costly investment has gone down the drain.

For decades Cairo's Middle Eastern prestige has been rivalled by that of Baghdad, often in partnership with Damascus. In 1971, when Sadat squashed a plot against him by allegedly pro-Soviet leaders and arrested virtually all Moscow's Egyptian agents, the Kremlin retaliated by boltering Iraq and Syria.

Outlook for Rabin: Battle With Factions

By Terence Smith

TERUSALEM.-Moments after Mr. Rabin, a heavy smoker, tage Yitzhak Rabin was nominated by the Labor party to succeed Premier Golds Meir, one of the former general's close aides stood in the rear of the party hall shaking his head in sympathy. "Now his troubles really begin," the aide said as he joined in the jubilant applause for the premierdesignate. "I don't envy him the next few weeks."

In the minds of many Israelis. indeed, the former chief of staff and ambassador to Washington has won a dubious honor. It is reminiscent of the old Broadway gag about the contest in which the first prize is a week in Philadelphia and the second prize is two weeks. Given Israel's current political turnoil, the nomination to be the man to overcome it is the political equivalent of second

Mr. Rabin has been invited by his party to do in the next six weeks what Mrs. Meir struggled and ultimately failed to do in four months: construct a viable coalition out of the political havoc that has followed the shock of the initial setbacks in the October

Factionalism

To do so he will have to unite the factions of his own splintered party and persuade some of the smaller parties to join Labor in the cabinet. The Labor party has a 54-seat plurality in the 120-seat parliament; Mr. Rabin's aim will be to enlarge that to at least a majority—61 seats—and preferably more.

It will not be easy since the divisions in the Labor party remain, and the smaller parties will lay down difficult and probably conflicting conditions for participation. If Mr. Rabin fails there will be no real alternative to a national election.

Although Mr. Rabin will face many of the same problems that confronted Mrs. Meir, he has several things going for him that she did not. In the opinion of number of Israeli politicians, these assets give him at least a 50-50 chance of success.

He will benefit from a clearly discernible trend toward conciliation and compromise. Nearly all Israelis are exhausted as a result of the months of sustained politi-cal crisis and infighting. They are hungering for new leadership, a government that can govern and a period of relative stability.

Furthermore, Mr. Rabin personifies the change that Israelis of every political persuasion seem to want. Unlike Mrs. Meir, Defense Minister Moshe Dayan and others in the current lead-crship, he bears no taint from the October war. Nor is he identified, in fact or in the public's mind with the factionalism that has nulled the Labor party apart and strained everyone's patience. It is possible that with his nomination the party has begun the process of healing the factional wounds that go back to the days of the late Premier David Ben-Gurion. The vote by the 614-member Central Committee cut across factional lines, and new alignments emerged in the Observing this. Ehud Avriel, 2 veteran political figure and former ambassador, said: "A new political dynamism is sweeping this party. The younger people who have been kept down so long are asserting themselves, and the divisions that separated the old guard

It is also significant that the Central Committee largely ignored the personal allegations leveled against Mr. Rabin in the 48 hours before the vote. Ezer Weizman. his former deputy, had published memorandum asserting that Mr. Rabin suffered a nervous col-

he had ned nicotine poisoning. Such a charge might well have destroyed a candidate in other circumstances whether justified or not. But the desire for a change in leadership apparently was a great among the committee members that they dismissed the matter and expressed their confidence in Mr. Rabin. One extraordinary side elies of the last two weeks of political maneuvering has been the virtual eclipse of Defense Minister Dayan He was absent during the Central Committee's two-day deliberation on Mrs. Meir's successor and as far as one could tell, unmissed.

After years as a pivotal figure his days in the Defense Ministry are clearly numbered. It is even possible that he will be left our of the next cabinet.

The October war robbed Mr. Dayan of much of his charisma and made him politically vulnerable. He has accumulated a lot of political enemies over the years as the party's "enjant ter. rible," and many of them seized the opportunity to set him back

Given Mr. Dayan's record of per. sonal and political resilience, r would be wrong to read him ou of the present or future political scene, but there can be no question that his stature has been much reduced. Foreign Minister Abba Eban has lost ground as well. He made no secret of his opposition to Mr. Rabin, and it is hard to imagine him serving in a Rabin government.

Perhaps the major beneficiar: of the maneuvering is Shimon Peres, the information ministr in the carctaker governmen who has a reputation for capability. After years in the shadow of Mr. Ben-Gurion and then of Mr. Dayan, he has emerged as his own man, prepared to set his own course. His decision to stand for the premiership was widely inter-preted as a declaration of his independence from Mr. Dayar. and his credible performance-the vote Monday was Rabin, 3%. Peres, 254—has greatly enhanced his prestige. Immediately after the balloting the two candidates embraced and pledged to work together in at sembling the government. The are expected to make an effective team, and the assumption is the Mr. Peres will have a key port

Sapir's Role

Of the major figures in the present government the only me to emerge with his political por intact is Pinhas Sapir, the finance minister. Working diligently behind the scenes, he swung to vote for Mr. Rabin. His politic expertise is expected to be cruck for Mr. Rabin in interparty neptistions, and regardless of Wh er he retains the finance portlok he is likely to continue as a influential figure.

The Labor party's selection Mr. Rabin also contains an in plicit message for Likud, the right-wing opposition bloc. Like Labor, Likud, though new itself. has many leaders who have bee around for 25 years.

With the prospect of an elec tion, Likud will be under pre sure to revemp its image an replace Menahem Begin, who Ma led the opposition since 1948, wit a younger, more appealing figur One possible successor would be Ariel Sharon, the flambors general who led the Israeli a Suez Canal in October and has emerged as Likud's fastest-risin

If Mr. Rabin fails to form government and an election scheduled for the fall, the demands for change in Likud may prove as irresistible as those in the Labor party.

-Letters

Two Americas

"Nixon From Alar" (Letters, April 16) concludes that, perhaps, there are two Americas-Mr. Nixon's conservatives, and The Washington Post's liberals. The letter is obviously correct. Some further observations on the subject follow: 1-There are also "two"

Frances, Englands, Germanys, Japans, elc., throughout the list of all countries in the world

2-The primary difference between "conservatives" and "liberals" has nothing to do with national boundaries. The dictionary defines "liberal" as inclining toward opinions or policies favoring progress or reform, and "conservative" as inclining (oward the preservation of the existing order of things; opposed to change.

3-The basic difference between the two camps, as reflected by political and social actions, is their concept of "man" and Conservatives 'human nature.'' believe that nothing (programs, education, environment) can change the basic, age-old instructs of "man"—including his strong instincts of self-survival and tribalism. Therefore wars will continue to be fought, and the profitmotivated free enterprise economy (capitalism) will result in the greatest, most efficient quality production-and happiness. Liberais believe that the basic instincts of man can be changed-so that Man finally will give up self-interest and tribalism and voluntarily really desire the equality of man. 4-The experience of all of recorded history (plus today's headlines) proves the conservative belief. Most of the American press, however, shares the liberal belief. That's why it's anti-Nixon (who basically is a conservative). T. CARL WEDEL, Cagnes-sur-Mer. France.

PARIS. April 26 (Reuters) — The French presidential election campaign entered its final week today with Socialist François Mitterrand and conservative Valery Giscard d'Estaing leading the race Gaullist former Prime Minister Jacques Chaban-Delmas, an early favorite, received support today from Foreign Minister Michel Jobert, However, public opinion polls have shown that Mr. Chaban-Debnas's fortimes have been fading recently and Mr. Jobert's intervention may have come too late to help

As Drive Enters Last Week

Nevertheless, one hope remained for Mr. Chaban-Delmas: the possibility that Gaullist outsider Jean Royer might withdraw from the race because of constant inierruptions of his election rallies, which are threatening to bring his campaign to a standstill Ultra-leftist youths are reportedly responsible for the interrups. Which were denounced yesparday by Mr. Mitterrand.

Important Statement Mr. Royer, an anti-pornography compaigner and champion o chookeepers, promised to make an important statement tomorrow after being forced from the cam ngign' rostrum in Toulouse last night under a hail of eggs, notten fruit and obscenities.

Mr. Royer's followers were beheved likely to vote for Mr. Chaban Delmas if Mr. Royer were to pull out of the race. But Mr. Royer, who is given 6 percent of vote in the latest opinion polis, is not believed to be planning to withdraw.

Breaking his silence on the presidential election, Mr. Johert said that he was endorsing the former prime minister because he held out the best hope of peace

He indicated that Mr. Chaban-carried on a peripheral radio station, but not on the staterun radio-TV network, Mr. Mitterrand was acclaimed at one of France's biggest political rallies in years.

The leftist candidate, who said he believed the presidency was within his grasp, was wildly cheered at the Palais des Sports in Paris by a crowd which organizers estimated at 100,000. The rally was Mr. Mitterrand's only major scheduled campaign appearance on the same platform

Earlier yesterday, the Mitterrand forces won a court order for the seizure of a bogus newspaper which depicts France ravaged by death, strikes and famine under the presidency of Mr. Mitterrand.

The Mitterrand camp charged that supporters of Mr. Chaban-Delmas were behind the newspaper, which is dated Jan. 2, 1975, More than two million copies have been circulated.

At the campaign's half-way mark, the battle for the first two spots in the first round of the election appears to be developing into a fight between Mr. Mitterrand and Mr. Giscard d'Estaing.

The latest surveys all predict Mr. Mitterrand would receive the biggest number of votes in the first round with a little more than 40 percent of the ballots, Mr. Giscard d'Estaing was placed second with around 27 percent and Mr. Chaban-Delmas third with about 23 percent.

If no candidate wins a majority in the first round, the two with the highest scores will go into the second and final round of the election May 19, when, in theory, the parties of the Gaullist coalition are expected to unite behind one candidate

Volunteer Army Cost U.S. Extra $734 Million

WASHINGTON, April 26 (AP). -The Defense Department yesterday revealed that the new volunteer armed force cost an additional $734 million in the first full year since elimination of the draft.

But the Pentagon estimated that this cost may be offset by savings resulting from longer periods of service per man-reducing it to $300 million or less.

The Pentagon estimates were supplied to the Senate Armed Services Committee. The department explained that a precise accounting for the re of the budget directly attributable to conversion to a volunteer force was impossible because it depended upon varying judgment about what program costs should be included. The Pentagon said its "most realistic estimate" was that direct costs would total $734 million in fiscal 1974 ending June 30 and $743 million in fiscal 1975.

But the annual budget savings resulting from the lower turnover rate is estimated at $400 million to $500 million in 1975 and $500 million to $600 million there-

Mr. Montanelli is a leading journalist who is widely read throughout Italy. He has managed to find financiers to back a venture that is expected to lose a considerable amount of money. at least during its first few years. It is rumored here that about $3 million, and possibly more, is at Mr. Montanelli's disposal.

Newsmen here are excited because Mr. Montanelli has begun highing talent for his new daily at salaries far higher than the atterage earnings in the profession here. Some contracts he has offered reportedly call for up to $5,000 a month for reporters and commentators.

Former Colleagues

Mr. Montanelli, 65, who will be managing editor of the new daily, appears to be assembling a writing staff mainly by luring former colleagues away from Corriere della Sera of Milan, Italy's orggest newspaper, for which ne worked for many years.

Mr. Montanelli's daily will be known as Il Giornale and is scheduled to start publishing in Milan early this summer.

Mr. Montanelli and his backers are initially aiming at a nation-wide circulation of 150,000 copies. Tuesday through Sunday. riere della Sera, which is published seven days a week, has a nationwide circulation of close 700,000. It loses money, as do

For some 50 years Daumier devoted much of his talent to drawings for satirical publications and produced about 4,000 lithographs on such subjects as the petits bourgeois of Paris, lawyers. doctors, artists, as well as on the stage and political events. One hundred and futy of these works are on show here and remind one. if a reminder is necessary, that Daumier had extraordinary capacity and range. The eloquence of his line, its theatrical expressiveness, its vigorous sinuosity make each drawing astonishingly memorable. Compared to much that the art world offers today. Tripodo's show is among the most alive. Tin cans, glass from old Chianti bottles, burned wood, clothes hancers, rocks and baby carriages are put to good use. With good humor and energy. Tripodo makes a world of totems, gods and absurd machines. A stone wheel, bristling with nails on one side, crunches, when rolled, as ocean surf. Bricks hanging by strings from a bicycle wheel seem to be components of an aeolian harp of a forgotten race. All the hollows of a clay man, stretched on the ground, sprout fresh, red tulips. Tripodo might be called a primitive, latter-day dadaist, Eut his work is more than that; a slapdash, happy-go-lucky spirit, sometimes too much abundance, pervades his universe of found things. Because his art seems so artless and useless, it is exactly

Robyn Denny/Pietro Consagra. Marlborough, 5 Via Gregoriana, Rome, to May 4.

On the upper floor at Marlborough are handsome abstractions by Denny, an Englishman. They are made of papers, twisted, pleated, hanging in streamers, or slit and fitted into each othershiny pages on top of each other like flounces of a gypsy skirt. They are cheerful and clever enough, but their apparent casualness is betrayed by careful enshrinement in plexiglass boxes.

Also at Marlborough is a show by Consagra, who has gone back to his original field-sculptureafter having lately shown oils and graphics. Here, upright, freeshaped slabs of marble look curiously busy. The natural markings of the stone are counteracted by grooves and pits that never come to terms with the material. Oddly enough, this unresolved contest between patterns is less disturbing than an obvious the material husks of a workaday lack of hand-tooling. The surfaces leave the unpleasant impression that a huge machine had crawled over them. The one quiet, controlled plece is in bianco statuario, the least exotic of all marbles, used in Carrara for gravestones and Litchen tables.

> Giuseppe Santomaso. Pictogramma. 45 Corso Rinascimento, Rome, to May 4.

> This veteran Venetian abstractionist's development as a printmaker is shown here from his earliest etchings, when he was still under the influence of Morandi, to a refined freedom of his own. The recent statements -clearly parallels to his larger, dryer oils shown last year-are made of angular elements hovering in sober balance. They are more intimate and convincing than the oils.

Castellani, Tartaruga, 22 Via Ripetta, Rome, to May 4. One of the oldest modern galleries has opened in a new location with a Castellani show. Eggshell-white canvas is pulled over claborate frameworks, studded with pegs; the canvas is nailed down in places in such a fashion that the nail dents alternate with peaks, formed by the pegs behind the material. At times the canvas is treated to make it transparent, permitting the outlines of the underpinnings to add another dimension. The aim is balance and purity. Castellani was once an architect. His well calibrated constructions are neither painting nor sculpture but fit either Sergio Birga. Trifalco. 22 Via del Vantaggio, Rome, to May 9. The work of this young Italian, who lives in Paris, brings to mind a host of master printmakers: the flamelike contrasts of Masereel and Posada woodcuts, Ensor's imaginative etchings, the realism of Dix and the Neue Sachlichkeit. All have impressed Birga. When he observes what is immediately before him, as in his straightforward views of the demolition of Les Halles, he is at his most vivid and on the road to an expression of his own.

THE ART MARKET

How an Expert Fills In The Gaps at a Print Sale

By Souren Melikian

DARIS, April 26 (IHT).-Marcel Lecomte is an expert of the pig school, one of Prance's two leading authorities on prints, who, in 40-year career, has seen all there is to see in his field yet retains passionate interest in his specialty.

When you see him in action, you understand why there is no substitute for attending auctions in person. Take the sale on Monday at the Hotel Drouot, conducted by auctioneer Guy Loudmer.

The catalogue was terse, as catalogues are for print sales and print sales are becoming more frequent. But Lecomte more than made up for the laconic catalogue and threw in some advice at objects came up for sale.

For instance, Edouard Vuillard's "L'Atelier," a lithograph, was described in the catalogue as "Cl. Roger-Marx, No. 11, very rare lithograph, margins trimmed, framing marks visible, about 20 copies printed." The "Cl. Roger-Marx" referred to art critic Claude Roger-Marx who wrote a catalogue raisonne on Vuillard's graphics. Lecunte pointed out that the lithograph had been done at the beginning of Vuillard's career as a graphic artist. The margins had probably been cut by his publisher Ambroise Vollard. All three copies that Lecombe had handled in his career had had their margins cropped in the same way, with rounded corners. A true masterpiece of neo-impressionism, the print made 4,870 francs.

At another point, a group of 11 frontispleces by Felicien Rops divided into small lots came up for sale. Lecomte identified from memory the books for which they had been made, commenting on the condition of every one.

The first three frontispleces by Rops, an extraordinary late 19thcentury symbolist, were sold together for only 986 francs. A major dry point, again by Rops (who is beginning to be "discovered" by art critic:, with an original three-color sketch on the margin, and with the artist's signature, rose to 2,320 francs. Five years ago, Lecomte said, it would have made about a fourth of that sum.

Lecomte's comments all through the sale were invaluable to beginners and helpful to experienced collectors, the sort of information art lovers can get only when they are on the spot. Moreover, the sale proved that there are still some very fine pieces by famous masters to be had. Those who are more interested in art than in collector's standard;

can make splendid acquisitions. A very fine aquatint by Camille Pissarro, "La Femme sur la Route," was sold for 1,390 francs to the expert himself—Lecomte acting on behalf of his friend Paul Proute, France's other great graphics expert.

But the Pissarro had its "faults"-from a collector's viewpoint. In the catalogue it was said to be signed. But Lecomte pointed out that this needed correction—the signature had been added by a previous owner. This is not unusual: Artists often forget to sign one or two prints in a run of 40 or 60. But commercially the lack of a signature diminishes the value drastically.

Had the Pissarro signature been genuine, Lecomte said, the price would have been three times as high.

The finest prints were often not by major painters. My personal favorite in the sale-and apparently that of Marcel Lecomte, who bought it for his own collection—was a superb etching by Theo van Rysselberghe, "Barques de Pêche," bearing the artist's stamp. Done in subtle shades of sepia, at 348 francs, it went for a song. It should be stressed that Lecomte, although himself interested in this print. drew attention to its fine quality, a sign of disinterestedness which is rare enough among collectors let alone among experts.

Lecomte was just as frank about other prints which he had been commissioned to buy by his friend Proutee. When he described T.A. Steinlen's "Misère," a signed lithograph, 19th in a series of 30, he emphasized its admirable qualities. There was, however, not one bid against his own starting bid and he got it, again for Proutée, for Such healthy straightforwardness, coupled with immense knowledge devoid of pomposity makes Lecomte's rare appearances at Hôtel Drouot worth one's while.

"A Ghost on Tiptoe" is intended as a vehicle for him, although that is putting a tired old cart before the horse. Mr. Morley is a slightly-tiring Atlas who carries the evening on his broad shoulders and, providing that an audience is as pleased with his performance as he is cand they better be, for he is apt to glare intimidatingly when laughs do not come), they will enjoy themselves mildly.

Anthology

"Ghost on Tiptoe" is the usual anthology of middle-aged, middlerlass fears—of death, of recalcitrant children, of the predic-tability of a long, unrewarding marriage—and fantasies. The play features that recent addition to stock characters ("Butterflies Are Free" and the current sex-comedy "Why Not Stay for Breakfast?" rely on it. too: the scatty, liberated, sexually indiscriminate hippy girl, here played, no more convincingly than usual, by Karin Fernald who deserves better. Mr. Morley is his abnormal stage self, a greedy, aging child pretending to be a rich grocer who has been told he has a year to live and decides to forget work and enjoy himself. The opening moments suggest that the comedy is going to match its serious theme-death and a person's preparations for that moment of extinction that defines a lifebut this is speedily abandoned for some more familiar jokes. Mr. Morley is equipped with a son who wants to be a poet and works as a municipal baths attendant and a wife who never listens to a word he says.

As the play proceeds, Mr. Morley is reduced to displaying his comic talents in a vacuum and he is a little curmudgeonly about even doing that: He gets through

Beginning in the tax year 1976-77, it is proposed that a foreign resident who has lived in Britain for five of the previous six years will be taxed on the full amount of his earnings, not only his salary, but also his investment income and capital gains.

For those taxed on half their salary (remitted or not), it appears the new system would tax investment income or capital gains only if remitted to Britain. The bill and its tax proposals must be passed by Parliament before becoming law. Some provisions of the bill could be changed during parliamentary committee work on the bill. The American Chamber of Commerce in London, in a statement issued after the bill's provisions were first outlined, asked: "Is it right to abandon the well-established and internationally-recogdistinction between resi dence and domicile in tax matters in favor of a mechanical rule which would treat a foreigner in the same way as a British subject born and resident here, solely because the foreigner has been ordinarily resident in the United Times, in an article on the tax proposals, said: "The appropriate price (for a foreigner resident in Britain) should be a reasonable contribution to the U.K.'s economic wellbeing.

"In-most cases, of course, this appropriate price should be that which has to be paid by ordinary U.K.-based persons, namely payment of full U.K. taxes.

"But simply because this is the most usual price it should not lend the government to assume that this price is the one which will be of the greatest overall economic advantage to the U.K.,"

OPEC Eyes Profits Tax On Companies

VIENNA, April 26 (UPI) .-Experts of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) will meet Monday to discuss ways of taxing excess oil company profits, an OPEC spokesman said today.

"We want to find wars of taxing windfall profits," the spokesman said.

He said experts from OPEC's 12 member states-which produce 85 percent of world oil exports-would meet for two days at the organization's Vienna beadquarters to draw up proposals for the next meeting of oil ministers in Quito, Ecuador, in June.

"Oil companies have made exorbitant profits like never before in the past few months," the spokesman said.

"Until 1973 oil companies" profits amounted to 50 or 60 cents on a barrel of crude oil. But in the last few months it rose to $4 or $4.50 per barrel." the spokesman stated.

Bank Lifts Prime Rate To Record 11% in U.S.

WESTBURY, N.Y., April 26 (Reuters).—Franklin National Bank today raised its prime rate to 11 percent from 10 1/2 percent, effective immediately.

Harold Gleason, chairman of the bank, said that moneymarket conditions more than justify the increase. "We might as well face reality and get to the top as soon as possible. Pussy-footing only prolongs the agony of waiting for the decline," he said.

Franklin, the 20th in size among domestic banks, is the first major money center bank to move to 11 percent, leapfrogging the 10 3/4 percent rate set by Citizens & Southern Bank, of Atlanta, earlier this week.

Money market analysts were surprised by the speed with which the rate has moved over the past three weeks, with many not expecting the prime rate to hit 11 percent until some time next month.

However, they said that the discount rate increase to a record 8 percent earlier this week has put further pressure on open market money rates, with one New York bank reportedly writing 20 to 90-day certificates of deposit for 11 percent this

One leading analyst, commenting on the prime rate situation, said, "Whatever historic perspective seems to have some out of the window."

U.S. Trade Deficit Is 1st in Nine Months

WASHINGTON, April 26 (Reuters).-The United States recorded its first trade deficit in nine months in March as the value of imports exceeded that of exports by $171.3 million, the Commerce Department reported today.

The March deficit followed surpluses of $213.1 million in Pebruary and $643.8 million in January and brought the surplus for the first quarter to $685.6

The deficit was primarily attributed to continuing increases in the price of oil. In March while the price rose to $1.766 bil-

The average price of a barrel of oil in March rose to $10.95 from $9.32 the previous month. On a balance-of-payments basis, the merchandise trade surplus in the first quarter was a seasonally-adjusted $200 million compared with $1.4 million in the fourth quarter of 1973. The department noted that the weighted average of prices for crude oil and products entering U.S. ports in the first quarter up 110 percent from the fourth quarter. The value of netroleum imports rose about 67 percent, or $1.9 billion, while volume declined about 20 percent. The $171.3-million deficit in March was the first since the $39.6-million deficit recorded last June. It reflected record exports of $7.674 billion and record imports of $7.845 billion. If insurance and freight are added to the import figure, the dollar value of imports climbs to $3,377 billion. On this basis the merchandise trade balance March shows a deficit of $702.7 record 11 percent prime rate. The market had rallied earlier from "an oversold position," analysts said. Before today's session it had sustained five consecutive losses, three of them substrutial.

NEW YORK, April 26 (Reuters .- Prices on the New York Stock Exchange closed firm after recovering from Franklin Na-tional Bank's announcement of

After Franklin National's announcement, prices turned mixed but slowly recovered to close with a moderate gain.
Analysts noted that although some banks have gone to a 103 4 percent prime rate, none have yet followed Franklin's lead to 11 percent and most major banks remain at 10 1 2 percent.

SCARS ON THE SOUL By Françoise Sagan. Translated from the French by Joanna Kilmartin, McGraw-Hill, 141 pp. $6.95. Reviewed by Anatole Broyard

are the words critics have used to praise the novels of Françoise Sagan. She possessed to an uncommon degree, they said, the typically French flair for nuance. She could sketch in a character in a gesture, immortalize him or her in a line or two of dialogue. Her sentences were as well shaped as a Chanel suit. She dealt in essences, light and sensuous as a perfume. National pride preened itself on her, an-Lious to compare her to Colette, as if these two particular writers embodied something that was peculiarly and exclusively French. Now, in "Scars on the Soul." woman behind the novels and very nearly destroyed her own myth. The book is a very flimsy novella padded out by alternating chapters of "Self-Portrait" in which she talks about the writing of this work, about her position as an enfant terrible in French culture, about life, love, death, war, women's liberation, nature, the decline of la gloire. and whatever else she can find in her Vuitton bag.

The nonfiction part of the book paradoxically discards all those qualities for which Miss Sagan was esteemed. Her "cool." her chic, her sophistication, her cynicism, worn like the Legion of Honor, are replaced by a covpomposity and page after page of prostituting themselves, we of puerile philosophizing. Here, are given to understand that for example, is Miss Sagan on her they transcend ordinary judgcountrymen: "Just look at rour- ments. "since culture, elegance, selves, little Frenchmen, well fed, and above all disinterestedness" ill-mannered, showing off wherever you are-even to your partner in the act of love. Conformism and snobbery lurk under the bedclothes with the same arrogant complacency as in drawing rooms." Moving on to God she says: "...Why did he have to make himself necessary solely by war of compensation?" She believed in him, she tells us, until she saw a film about Dacken. Now, she would "face a tiring squad rather than say or do cer-

She feels nothing but "revulsion, boredom and distaste" for the "mediocrity" of life in Paris. What would French writers do without boredom and mediocrity for it but to escape to deserted Deauville Tho, the voluptuousness of deserted places! and to press her bare foot recklessly on the accelerator of her Ferrari. Fortunately, she is not married, for the truth is that the married couple, or the individual, or the mass of people are completely deadened by a way of life that is designed to deaden them... and it follows from this of course ... that the inequality of the seres is blamed for the mutual echaustion of a married couple. In defense of the intoxication of sports cars. Mess Sagan seriously warns the world at large that "only one in a hundred thousand recovers from drug addiction, and at what a price, after what damage!" Even the peasants in the provinces, she informs us, have traded their tisanes for tranquilizers. Things have come to such a pass "in this vast, mindless cacophony that daily life has become incluctable, uncontrollable, and truly unacceptable to any civilized person..." Warming to her opoca-typee, she adds: "There are even times when I long for, ves. long for the advent of that steel gray sirplane, the sudden roar of the DEPT, spare understated, sub- engine, a little too loud, the tle, discrplined, classic—these stunned faces raised toward the sound, and the black package, hardly visible, that will drop from 1..

Miss Sagan has not even troubled to describe her catastrophe correctly---the sudden roar" and "the black package"-and she of all people should know that the word "inclustable" can only be used ironically. But then she seems to have developed a prose style appropriate to her new at-titudes. In her story of Sebastian and Eleanor—a brother and sister resurrected from one of her plays-we find a disconcerting number of declamations like this one: "For, just as the imcence are registered and engraved on the memory far more deeply than those of middle age, so there are certain influences, certain attractions, mental or physical. which, if experienced at the tender, that's to say the awkward age, continue to exert their power 30 years later."

Pro Football Makes Changes to Boost Offensive Game Defensive Tactics Restricted, Field Goals Are Discouraged

By William N. Wallace

NEW YORK, April 26 (NYT) ... by the league's competition comresterday in an effort to enliven he National Football League

The new rules discourage field goals by returning the goal posts of the end line of the end zone. as in college football, and having missed field goals returned to the line of scrimmage if it is beyond the 20-yard line.

Porward passing will be encouraged by restricting the de-fensive tactics. Sudden-death overtime periods will be played in an effort to reduce the number of ties in regular season games as well as playoffs.

The goal posts were moved in 1833 from the end line of the end 200e to the goal line to encourage field-goal kicking. That same year the league permitted passes to be thrown anywhere behind the line of scrimmage to spur the aeriai game.

How the New Rules Shape Up

The package of nine NFL revisions, generally, is as follows:

1. One sudden death period of 15 minutes duration will be played at the end of any tie game to help break ties. The first team to score in the extra period wins. If there is no score, the tie stands. In 182 results recently the part the number of ties has regular season games over the past five years, the number of ties has averaged six per year.

2. Kickoffs are to take place from the kicking team's 35-yard line. rather than the 40, which puts an added burden on the kicker trying to reach or go beyond the opponent's end zone. The purpose is to bring out more running returns of kickoffs rather than the no return and the static touchback that puts the ball on the receiving teams 20-yard line.

3. Goal posts will be moved to the back of the end zone adding 10 yards to field-goal attempts and the point-after-touchdown kick.
The latter becomes a 19-yard attempt rather than one from only 9

4. If a field goal attempt is no good, the ball goes back to the line of scrimmage, or the 20-yard line, whichever is farther from the goal line. Heretofore, the ball returned to the 20 after all failures. Random field-goal attempts from 40 yards out and beyond on fourth dean will be far fewer, while the out-of-bounds punt inside the opponent's 10-yard line (the coffin-corner kick) will increase.

5. Members of the kicking team cannot run downfield until the ball is kicked. This holding action at the line of scrumnage will make sick returns more popular and the no-return fair catch less so.

6. To enhance a wide receiver's ability to get free to catch a pass. be cannot be cut down by a block below the knees-the so-called reil

7. Once the receiver is downfield by more than three yards from the line of scrimmage, he can be hit only once by any defending player. This change, in effect, rules out the bump and run technique whereby the defending back continually hit the receiver, ran with him and then hit him again to knock him out of the pass pattern. 8. The wide receiver, however, can no longer return to the line of scrimmage and block a defender below the waist. This climmates the crackback block on the linebacker.

9. The penalty for holding by an offensive blocker was reduced from 15 yards to 10. The purpose is to give the offensive team a little better chance to move the ball after the penalty has been assersed.

MADRID, April 26 (IHT) .- His father mobiles and Rikky von Opel knew when to start driving them.

"Timing is the most important thing in life," said the 26-year-old head of the Opel dynasty. "I hit automotive driving at the right time."

This is a good season for up-and-coming grand prix drivers to establish their names. Jackie Stewart, last year's champion, has quit. Emerson Fittipaldi, who last year won the races that Stewart didn't, has switched teams and is still growing accustomed to his Marlboro. In three grand prix races this season, three different drivers have won-Fittinaldi. Denny Hulme, also in a Marlboro, and Carlos Reutemann in a Brabliam.

Went to U.S.

Late in the 19th century, people were also telling Adam Opel that his machine was before its time. They were wrong. The Onel family has not made many bad decisions. In 1928, a year before the Depression, Rikky's father, Pritz-then master of tite family's finances-sold his car-making business in Germany to General Motors, which kept the established Opel name. In 1929, Fritz von Opel moved to the United States.

Another decision that his father made was to "forbid" Rikky from becoming a race driver. So Rikky, who didn't want to go against his father's wishes, started driving under the pseudonym of Antonio Bronco. He said he chose the name bccause his mother was Spanish. Also, he had ence toyed with the idea of becoming a bullfighter, but decided he did not have enough Spanish blood in him to make it blg in the arenas of Spain. Instead, he

His father did not want his son involved cangerous games because Ricky was "the only son to carry on the dynasty, the last direct heir of Adam Opel. My father wanted me to give 100 percent to the family enterprises," Rikky said. The Opel money is now in investments in the United States and Europe. When his father died three years ago, Rikky took charge of the investments and has since worked out a compromise arrangement with himself.

Very Active

He is occupied from six to eight months with auto racing, and he devotes four months to his business offices in London, New York and Dusseldorf. When he can, during the summer, he tans himself at his summer home in St. Tropez.

His year is filled with activity. But if he wanted he would never have to work. Rikky, however, has developed into a competitive man, whether it be finance or cars. Auto racing is dangerous, and come people wonder why a man who has everything takes risks on his life.

Rikky, a good-looking man who would rather talk about metaphysics than nuts and bolte, says, "All my friends think I'm completely mad." It was the same way with the friends of Peter Revion, killed earlier this month in a practice crash. Rikky, born in New York, says, "I like to live under prescure," and the excitement of auto racing plus his business affairs give him a full life. He says, "Competing is one thing that turns me on. I like to do what is hardest and the most difficult." So when he was offered a chance last week of driving for the Brabbam team. he immediately accepted.

"You like to go to the top in anything that you do," Rikky said.

In today's opening practice runs for Sunday's race, an official standing on the wrong side of the course was hit by the Mariboro of Hulme and was taken to a hospital in serious condition.

When the training resumed, the Lotus of Sweden's Ronnie Peterson clocked the fastest lap time, 1 minute, 18.47 seconds. Second and third were the Ferraris of Nikki Lauda of Austria and Switzerland's Clay Regazonni. Reutemann had the fourth best clocking.

Opel had a bad o pening day, with the worst qualifying time of the 29 starters. His car's new engine broke down early in practice. By the end of the day, he had a new one.

Art Buchwald Plain Speaking

WASHINGTON.—One of the What do you intend to do mest successful books of the about it? Fear is "Plain Speaking." Merle Miller's interviews with Harry Truman when the former President was living in Independence, Mo. Mr. Truman was quite frank about his opinions of the peo-Ple he knew when he was President.

It is quite possible that 20 years from now someone like Merlo 🕏 Miller might take his tape recorder to San Clemento Buchwald and merries former President Nixon on his S1st birthday. It could go something like this. Q-Mr. President, what do you consider was your greatest accomplishment when you were in the White House? A-I kept them from getting the tapes. They did everything they could but they never found them. Do you know where they were hidden? Q-No, sir.

A-I had a pumpkin patch just behind the rese garden and I hid the tapes in the pumpkins. I got the idea from Alger Hiss. (Laugister.) Q-That was a great idea. Mr. President. Without the tapes, of course, they couldn't find any evidence to impeach you.

A-You can say that again. To this day no one has been able to find them. You know the special prosecutor is still asking for them. Every week someone serves me a subpoens. But I've ignored them all. If I've said it once I've said it a hundred times, 22 years of Watergate is enough. Q-I noticed you were just served with a subpoena last week.

$139,200 for Yiolin

LONDON, April 26 (UPI) .--U.S. violinist Elaine Weldon sold her Guarneri violin yesterday for £58,000 ($139,200) th: second highest auction price ever paid for a musical instrument. A spokesman for Christie's where the sale was held, said the highect price paid for a violin was $201,600 for a Stradivarius at Sotheby's in 1971.

A-James St. Clair is in the next room writing an answer to it. Q-Is he still working for you?

A-Yup, he's getting a little deaf and his eyesight is not as good as it used to be, but he's still one heck of a lawyer. Anyone that can keep stringing along the House Judiciary Committee for two decades is my kind of man.

Tou see, the trick was never to say we wouldn't give them the tapes. The trick was to always say we were working on it, and we'd give them an answer in a few weeks. It's been going on since 1974 and here we are in 1924, and they still haven't got what they've asked for.

Q-Next to keeping the House

from getting the tapes, what do you consider your greatest accom-plishment as President?

A-Paying my back income taxes. I want to tell you that was some blow when they asked me for a half-million dollars. If I hadn't gone into the real estate I left the White House, I don't think I would ever have gotten even. But now that we've got the San Clemente Sun City for Senior Citizens and the Key Biscayne Condominium project. we're in fat city,

Q-How would you assess the people who worked to, you?

A-They were the finest men I've ever known. Naturally I was sorry to see so many of them ge to jail. But when you're President of the United States you can't let personal emotions get involved in your decisions. Q-What did you think of Gerry Ford? A-I never trusted the man. He kept saying I should turn over al' the evidence I had to the committee. You know something? I don't think he was as dumb as veryone said he was. He knew if I turned over the evidence he'd become President. Q-Mr. President. it's been 18 ears now since you left office. Is there one thing you would have done differently?

A-Yes. I would have advised George Allen of the Redskins to send Larry Brown off tackle, in-stead of having Billy Kilmer throw a pass to Charley Taylor

Exterior view of Japanese palace to be used as a guesthouse for foreign dignitaries.

Japan's 'Versailles'—$1-Billion Guesthouse

By Sam Jameson

TOKYO-Sixty-five years ago, Japan built a miniature version of the palace of Versailles for its crown prince, later to become Emperor Taishi (1912-1926).

Now his palace has been refurbished and turned into a state guesthouse. The result is a $1-billion memorial to a Japanese dream to "catch up with the West," a reminder of the days of the Meiji era in Japan when a nation unsure of itself internationally turned to foreign models in a desperate effort to modernize,

The ceremonial opening of the refurbished building adjacent to Crown Prince Akihito's palace in the Akasaka section of Tokyo took place this week.

The Costs

The land alone-140,000 square yardswas valued at $596 million by the Japanese real estate federation. The building, if constructed today, would cost at least $370 million, according to the architects who spent five years refurbishing and modernizing it. The actual cost of refurbishing, paid by the government, came to $35.3 million.

Prime Minister Kakuei Tanaka has called it a "state guesthouse without parallel in the world"-and that it may be. But the state guests who use it will find little in it to remind themselves they are in Japan. Only a separate annex added to the compound provides a Japanese flavor. It features a very large dining room with tatami (traditional straw mat) flooring, fashioned to fit foreign tastes with door frames tall enough to allow even a 6-foot-4 foreigner to pass beneath without bumping his head, and cushioned seats placed before a long table under which a depression in the floor has been fitted to allow upright sitting rather than the traditional folded-leg

Its simplicity is a breathtaking contrast to the rest of the palace. The entrance, an area of about 40 square feet, is lighted to display a single 6 inch-tall flower vase hanging from the wall.

In the palace, lions' heads, or nate gold carvings plastering pillars, paintings on the ceilings, cloisonne works and thousands of 18th-century-styled designs provide an aura of overwhelming opulence.

Who will be the first visitor to use it has become the question. The late French President Georges Pompidou, who had scheduled a trip to Japan in April (which he cancelled before his death) was to have received that bonor.

Now. President Nixon. Chinese Premier Chou En-lai, Soviet Communist party chief Leonid I Brezhnev and Philippine President Ferdinand Marcos all appear to be in the running. None of them has announced dates for a visit to Japan but trips by all of them are being discussed for 1974, Whoever happens to be the first will discover that great attention has been paid to detail. Almost every carving in the building has been restored. To make the palace more comfortable, all the floors were ripped up, heating facilities installed and new floors laid. Then an air-conditioning system was put in. It took three years to restore a single French painting in the ceiling of a salon.

More than $2.5 million was spent on furniture—of which there are 1847 pieces. The money went toward repairing 510 original pieces, making copies of 420 more and purchasing 400 pieces from abroad.

Fidelity.

At the turn of the century when the palace was built (1899 to 1909), the architects were so faithful to the Versailles ideas that they installed only six toiletsthat was all there were at Versailles.

A staff of 43 has been assigned to manage the building. Janitors, waiters, cooks and other servants will be taken on temporarily as necessity dictates. The palace has not been used regularly since 1925 when Hirohito became emperor. After World War II the property was turned over to the government and, for a while, used as the library for the Diet (parliament). Now, it is going back into service

Patriots' Awards to PEOPLE: Hope, Mamie Eisenhower

Bob Hope and Mamie Eisenhower have received awards from the Pittsburgh Committee of 76 in recognition of their patriotism. Hope was in Pittsburgh Thursday to accept the Constellation Award tor his services in entertaining U.S. troops around the world. Accepting the Molly Pitcher Patriot Award for Mrs. Eisenhower was Maj. Gen. Fred Davison, commanding general of the Army's Washington district. In the first award ceremony in 1973, the kudos went to President and Mrs. Nixon. 2 5 5

The bout between former heavyweight champion Jack Dempsey and his landlord ended in a draw Thursday in a New York court. Dempsey had refused to pay a stiff rent increase for his Broadway restaurant. The Inch Corporation threatened to evict him. In court. Dempsey agreed to start paying the new rent May 1, with the landlord agreeing not to evict him before Dec. 31. In the meantime, they will try to work out a new lease.

A circuit court jury has awarded $1,000 to a Memphis. Tenn., woman who said she was struck and insulted by singer Jerry Lee Lewis at a nightclub in 1971. Ann McMahon testified that Lewis had made vulgar and in-sulting remarks to her over the PA system pulled her across the organ he was playing and a few minutes later, threw a music book a her and then struck her in the face. Lewis denied the accusations. He claimed that Mrs. Mc-Mahon threw a book at him after he refused to play a song she had requested.

Henry Fonda is in Lenox Hill Hospital in New York, suffering from what a spokesman called absolute, complete exhaustion." The 68-year-old actor collapsed in his dressing room Tuesday night after a performance in his grueling one-man play, "Clarence Darrow." It is unlikely that Fonda will be able to go on nationwide tour with the play, as originally planned. Mrs. Fonda said Thursday that her husband "isn't really sick-they put him in the hospital because that's the only place you can keep him quiet." The play had been scheduled to close in New York Saturday.
